Smart Selling

Be Smart About How You Service and Sell

• Stand Up and Smile!
• Make Conversation
• Ask Questions and Select Products
• Review Benefits while Demonstrating Products
• Create Value with Cost Per Session
• TRY! TRY! TRY!

Stand Up and Smile

A smile is a good first impression! Standing up and greeting every customer with a smile is the very best impression you can give. Standing up shows respect as well as interest. Just sitting in the chair…or on a stool…behind a desk…can give the impression that you are uninterested or have low energy or enthusiasm.

Make Conversation

Customers who feel welcomed by salon employees will spend more time talking with them, as well as wanting to learn from them. Happy clients buy more. Remembering a customer's name when they arrive is important…asking how they are today is another warm welcome…re-confirming the type of tanning bed they would like…and even commenting that their tan seems to be coming along nicely, are all methods of making comfortable, warm conversation with your client—asking them what their last name is and what bed they want is not conversational.

Ask Questions and Select Products

Whether dealing with a new customer or an existing customer, asking open-ended questions…questions that start with who, what, where, why, how or when…is the best method of conversational "selling".

Based on the customer's responses to your questions…you will easily be able to select appropriate products to review and demonstrate to your customers.

Open-ended questions are better than "Yes/No" questions because they do a better job of creating a conversation between you and the customer.

Ask Questions and Select Products

What answers can you get when you ask a customer "Do you need a lotion?" Nothing but "yes" or "no" and most of the time it will be "no". Now what kinds of answers might you get if you ask a customer "What lotion are you tanning with today?" This can't be answered with a simple "yes" or "no", so it stimulates conversation and conversation leads to sales.

Create Value with Cost Per Session

Some clients may be tempted to purchase lotion sample packettes instead of a full-size bottle of lotion, as the upfront investment of a packette is much lower than a full-size bottle. While purchasing a sample packette is a fantastic way for a client to try a product, purchasing packettes repeatedly is not the most cost-effective option for the client long term. Show the client the value of buying a full-size bottle by figuring the CPS of Current Mood®.

Solution: The CPS for a full-size bottle of Current Mood® is $4.70: $94.00/10oz.=$9.40; $9.40 x 0.1=$0.94. If the client bought the full-size bottle they would spend $4.70 per tanning session as opposed to paying $14.00 to buy a packet each session.

Try! Try! Try!

Suggestive selling is key to your selling success, but more importantly, think of it as another customer service skill. If you’ve selected a product and the customer has said “yes” to purchasing it, don’t stop there. TRY to sell another product! Maybe a tan extending lotion, a tan extending body wash or a facial or lip product would be a good add-on sale.

Say: “This is the _ (add-on product) _ that goes with your (original product). It will _ (what it does) _.”

What if the customer likes the idea of the original product you showed them, but feels the price is too high? TRY to introduce them to another item within the line that is lower-priced. The point is to TRY! TRY! TRY!

Create The Rapport

- Open the door and greet client when possible.
- Walk clients to their tanning or sunless room—tell them to relax and enjoy—they deserve it.
- Come from behind the counter to talk with your client—this makes you more approachable.
- Compliment, compliment and compliment—A sincere compliment will create a connection with your client and disarm even the angriest complainer.
- Have a conversation with clients—you will never hear no when you ask questions that the answer cannot be no.
  a. Who told you about our salon?
  b. What kind of results are you looking for?
  c. How often do you think you will be tanning indoors/outdoors?
  d. What are your plans for this evening/weekend?
  e. Where are you going on vacation?
  f. When are you going on vacation?
  g. What activities will you do on vacation?
  h. What special occasion are you tanning for?
  i. Why are you tanning with us?
  j. How would you like to pay for this?

Open ended questions, that your client can’t answer with a simple “yes” or “no”, will create conversation—conversations create rapport and rapport creates trust. Sales will follow.

Tingle

Test small area before application. This product causes a reddening and tingling or warming sensation. A base tan is recommended before use. Not intended for sensitive skin. Not intended for facial area. Not intended for outdoor use. Extra care should be taken when handling children and pets as the reddening effect could be transferred to skin even hours after use.

Tingle

Products are available in a range of intensity from Tingle 2 to Tingle 40, the higher the number the more intense the tingle. First time users should start with the lowest tingle and work their way up to stronger tingles when they are comfortable.

The tingle response initiates fairly quickly (within 5 minutes) once the product is applied and will last anywhere from 20 minutes to a few hours.
  - Testing a small area before application is mandatory. Do not apply to face. Tingle products should be applied to the skin immediately prior to tanning. Wipe or wash hands after use. Do not touch eyes or sensitive areas of the body. Showering is not recommended for four hours after use. Australian Gold® Lotion Types

Bronzing Technology

Australian Gold® utilizes different categories of bronzers, each designed to deliver a unique result, all leading to unsurpassed color enhancement. Each product has a different combination of several bronzers at various levels. As a tanner moves up in price point, the level or dimension of bronzers gets stronger and higher. This ensures a tanner can achieve remarkable color at any price point level.

Natural or Immediate Bronzers

This technology uses natural based extracts to provide immediate color to the skin that lasts one-to-two days. Examples of natural bronzers include Walnut Shell Extract, Caramel, Henna and Melanin. These natural extracts are considered cosmetic bronzers because they add additional color to the skin, much like cosmetic make-up.

Melanin Enhancing Bronzers

Melanin enhancing bronzers are the newest technology in color enhancement. These bronzers break tradition with an advantageous twist of a self-tanner based on stimulation of melanin biosynthesis. These are streak-free and do not wash off the skin because the color is a natural tan of the skin, but at the darkest tone possible. Melanin enhancing bronzers can be used alone or with Natural or Delayed Bronzers and do take longer to create color, but last longer and are much darker.

Delayed Bronzers

This technology uses the self-tanning agent, DHA, to increase dark color. Erythrulose is often used in conjunction with DHA. Both are sugar cane extracts that chemically darken the protein in the skin, the more DHA used the darker the shade of brown. The color typically lasts four to seven days and is seen within two-to-four hours after application. Hand washing is required with the use of DHA tanning lotions.

Delayed bronzers are designed to give an extra boost of color for faster visible results and keep color to the skin longer.

Melanin Enhancing Bronzers

Melanin enhancing bronzers are designed to be low maintenance, enhance darker natural color and maintain the bronze hue longer.

Tingle
